THE HISTORY OF SHAPIRO'S DELI

"Cook good, serve generously, price modestly, and people will come." Since 1905, this was, and still remains, the guiding philosophy of Shapiro's Delicatessen. After emigrating to America in 1903 from Odessa, Russia, Louis Shapiro opened a small grocery store just south of downtown Indianapolis with his wife Rebecca and their eight children. Louis was a grocer by trade, previously operating the American Grocery Company in his homeland. The original downtown grocery, still located on South Meridian Street, was an 18-foot-wide space, where the Shapiro family called upstairs home. Sales of canned goods, pickles, mayonnaise, and kosher deli meats were brisk.

Business boomed through several expansions of the kitchen and the addition of a bakery. Our signature corned beef, pastrami, rye bread, pickles, and desserts are presented today just as they were many years ago, piled high and loaded with the finest quality ingredients. Now expanded into Carmel, Indiana, Shapiro's Deli remains an Indianapolis landmark and a favorite topic in many publications.

Shapiro's has been recognized as superior by virtually every publication in and around Indianapolis and continues to be spotlighted by national publications including USA TODAY, "best corned beef in America", and "One of the Top 10 Delis in America"; Redbook Magazine, "one of the 10 best chicken dishes in America"; Gourmet Magazine reports "At Shapiro's Delicatessen the food is genuinely Jewish." By "genuine" we mean that the corned beef is superb. And we don't mean superior by Indianapolis standards, but by lofty Lower East Side of New York City standards." And from the Indianapolis Star, Taste of America, "We would stack Shapiro's corned beef sandwich against any corned beef sandwich, from anywhere."
